

HOW TO HANDLE REJECTION

1. ACKNOWLEDGE YOUR FEELINGS

Rejection can hurt, but it's normal and natural to feel sad, angry, or disappointed.

Don't ignore or deny your emotions, but rather accept them. It's OK not to be OK.

4. LEARN FROM THE EXPERIENCE

Rejection can be an opportunity to learn and improve yourself, but it doesn't mean you have to change who you are. Don't blame yourself or the other person, but rather try to understand what happened and what you can do differently in the future.

2. CHALLENGE YOUR THOUGHTS

Rejection may hurt your self-worth, but you're not unlovable. Replace negative thoughts with more balanced thoughts and reminders of your skills, goals, values, and support.

3. SEEK SUPPORT

Rejection may make you feel alone, but you have people who care. Reach out to your friends, family, or professionals for support and comfort. They can help you deal with stress, pain, and sadness. You can also connect with other teens who face rejection, online or offline, and share your stories and feelings.

5. STAY OPEN TO NEW OPPORTUNITIES

- Understand that rejection is a part of life and doesn't define your future and inherent self-worth.
- Stay open to new opportunities, people, and experiences.
- Embrace the idea that setbacks are temporary, and new possibilities will arise.
